NOTES FOR VISITOR
UNIVERSITY OF SÃO PAULO

São Paulo
The Portuguese village of São Paulo de Piratininga was marked by the founding of a Jesuit college of twelve priests on January 25, 1554, with a small structure built of rammed earth by the Indian (native) workers and located on top of a steep hill between the rivers Anhangabaú and Tamanduateí. For the next two centuries, São Paulo developed as a poor and isolated village that survived largely through the mostly native population’s cultivation of subsistence crops. For a long time in the colonial period, São Paulo was one of the poorest regions of the Portuguese colony and the only village in Brazil’s interior, as travel was too difficult to reach the area. In 1681 the Marquis de Cascais, donee of the Captaincy of São Vicente, moved the capital to the village of São Paulo, designating it the “head of the captaincy”. But it was only in the end of the 17th century with the discovery of gold in the region of Minas Gerais that São Paulo gained importance, bringing attention to new settlers. The town became a center for the bandeirantes or “flag-bearers” (intrepid explorers who marched into unknown lands in search for gold, diamonds, precious stones and Indians to make slaves of), who organized excursions into the land with the primary purpose of profit and the expansion of territory for the Portuguese crown. The bandeirantes eventually became politically powerful as a group, and were considered responsible for the expulsion of the Jesuits from the city of São Paulo in 1640, after a series of conflicts with them over the trade of Indian slaves. When the gold ran out in the late 18th century, São Paulo shifted to growing sugar cane, which spread through the interior of the Captaincy. In 1827 (five years after Brazil became independent from Portugal), a law school was founded at the Convent of São Francisco, and is now part of the Universidade de São Paulo; the influx of students and teachers gave a new impetus to the city’s growth. The expansion of coffee production was a major factor in the growth of São Paulo, as it became the region’s chief export crop and yielded good revenue. Nowadays, São Paulo has become one of the most ethnically diverse cities in the world.

The Saint Michael's Church, in the district of São Miguel Paulista, is the oldest church in the city, built in 1622, replacing a small 1560 chapel built by José de Anchieta. This chapel was rebuilt in 1940 and became cathedral, but today it is still possible to see the mud walls built in the 17th century. Another important history treasure of the city is also located in the Eastern area, Immigrant Memorial, in the district of Brás. Built in 1887 to receive people who had newly come from several countries, this place still keeps objects, pictures and documents of the time it was used as a shelter for immigrants that later went to the coffee plantation farms in the countryside of São Paulo. You can find information about people who passed there in digital files. An old train offers short rides. Drinking water

It’s recommended to drink filtered water whenever it is possible although the water of the State of São Paulo is potable. São Paulo offers a wide network of hospitals, public and private clinics.
